

ABSTRACT

A security system for use in a distributed network includes a service provider selectively accessible via a network by a plurality of end users each having an 5 access device for accessing the network. A control mechanism is included which is disposed at a location of the service provider and accesses and modifies stored information on each access device of the end users to designate portions of the information to prevent access thereof by the end users.